Pressure Points:
Dating From a Distance

70% of singles report feeling more anxious than usual lately*

61%
think it's possible to start a romantic relationship during isolation

COVID-19 has made

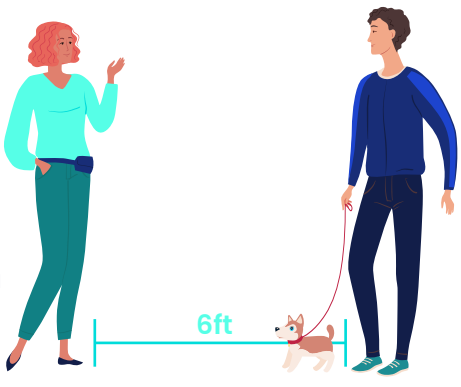

40%

of men want to take dating more seriously

Singles take this seriously:

95%
have complied with social distancing

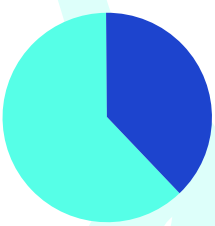

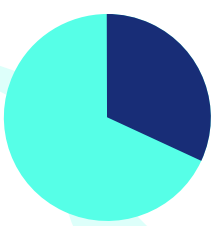

singles won't date someone who isn't taking social distancing seriously

60% of singles are more likely to use video chat with a prospective date during social isolation

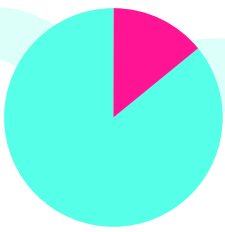

Over the past three months:

38%
have spent more time on dating apps

32%
have used a livestreaming product

14%
have had phone sex

During social isolation, singles are 2x more likely to miss hugging than sex (34% vs 17% respectively)

1 in 4 singles (26%)
admit to looking up their ex on social media in the last 3 months

30%
have spoken to an ex

PlentyofFish

2,000 U.S.-based singles, ages 18-65+, were polled online in March 2020

*Based on responses from March 27–April 12, 2020